A LASKA turns into a cover story

Our project development A LASKA receives its first recognition in the „Real Estate of the Year“ award. The award was presented for the first time and honors projects with a high architectural standard that have not yet been completed or are still in the planning stage.

We are also pleased that, thanks to the innovative facades of our planned office twin designed by the renowned Graft architects, the Callwey publishing house has chosen A Laska as its book title.

Centrally located at Berlin's Ostkreuz, both buildings are being constructed in an environmentally sensitive timber hybrid structure with wooden surfaces in the interiors. There will be plenty of room to work, free space to think, and the opportunity to retreat: For example, in one of the many bay windows that protrude from the facade like boxes, or on the roof terrace. Also planned are a variety of catering options, parking spaces with e-charging stations and sustainable air conditioning. The location is highly valued thanks to its diverse leisure and cultural opportunities and offers a green, lively neighborhood – perfect for companies looking for an office location that offers significant added value and an attractive alternative to a home office.
